Dublin City University is a young university, situated on an 85 acre campus three miles north of the River Liffey in the city centre and just a 15-minute drive from Dublin airport. With the city just a 10-minute bus drive away, students of DCU have the best of both worlds; the social and cultural benefits of city life, but with the security and vibrancy of a university campus built very much for today.

Dublin City University was initially set up to fulfill the national requirement for a highly-trained workforce with skills in the areas of business, science and electronics, computer technology, communications and languages and as an agent for change in its local community. The first students came through the door in 1980 and the university is now recognized nationally and internationally as a centre of academic excellence.

It was awarded university status in 1989 and was considered at the time to be an 'unconventional' university. It broke with the traditional mould and introduced a number of ideas, which had enormous impact on the Irish education system. DCU was the first university in Ireland to introduce work placement (INTRA) as part of its degree programs. The aim is for students to put their academic skills into practice in the work environment. Its degree programs were also the first to be interdisciplinary, with, for example science students taking business courses, business students taking languages and language students taking computing. Many DCU students study at universities in Spain, France, Germany and Austria as part of their degree programs under Erasmus exchange agreements.

President:

Institute (BDI), one of the DCU-led Science Foundation Ireland Centers for Science, Engineering and Technology (CSET). Professor Brian MacCraith took up his appointment as President at DCU on 13th July 2010. Professor MacCraith, was previously Professor of Physics in Dublin City University and Director of the Biomedical Diagnostics.

Number of degree programs:

There are over 80 programs, divided almost equally between undergraduate and postgraduate courses. Postgraduate research supervision is provided on a broad range of subject areas across all disciplines, including technology, engineering, business, communications, humanities, science and health.

Dublin is your place! - Dublin ranked 8th best place to study (QS World Rankings)

According to the latest QS survey, Dublin is ranked 8th best city to study in the world. The survey places Dublin ahead of cities such as New York, Madrid, Amsterdam, Glasgow and Boston. This is the first independent survey carried out by QS which ranked the cities according to a range of measures taken from public information, population sizes, number of educational establishments and more importantly, their quality.

QS also looked at a range of factors which affect the learning experience such as the ratio of international students, quality of living and affordability.

According to the survey, "Dublin combines 'top-class study facilities and historic surroundings with a cracking social scene and famously friendly locals. Cultural mainstays such as 'the craic', Guinness and St Patrick's Day may have spawned a global Irish cliché industry, but if you visit the real thing you'll see why there are so many imitations. Dublin has become a more multicultural and cosmopolitan place in the past two decades but at its heart remains a tradition and culture that is all its own"
